

NEW ERA FOR NATIONALISM

- 56 CONSTITUENCIES FOUGHT IN THE CAMPAIGN THEY SAID COULDN'T BE DONE - AS TORIES BITE DUST!
- OVER 7% IN EAST LONDON SEATS
- BNP BROADCAST ON MAJOR CHANNELS
- EXCELLENT LOCAL ELECTION RESULTS
- NATIONALISM BOOMS EUROPE-WIDE

THE BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY has fought the most successful electoral campaign since its formation in 1982, standing in 56 constituencies nationwide, with an election address delivered to every home - and confounding the predictions of the enemies of Britain that it could not be done.

Over 7% of the vote was won in two East End seats, including the constituency in which BNP Chairman John Tyndall stood, and the deposit saved in Dewsbury. The BNP beat all the other 'right-wing' parties, excepting the 'single issue' Referendum Party, which scored better - after spending £25 for every vote won! If the BNP had stood in as many seats we would have won nearly 400,000 votes! The BNP's hard-hitting Party Political Broadcast was shown on all major TV channels except C4, and heard on BBC and other radio stations. More than two million leaflets were distributed throughout the country. Local election results were also excellent. All this good news for patriots is swelled by the removal of the Tory swindlers, who have lied and lied to the British people since 1979. Yet more - the BNP's massive move forward has taken place against a background of a huge growth in nationalist movements throughout Europe over the last years. Nationalism is on the march as never before in the post-war world of treacherous anti-white regimes!

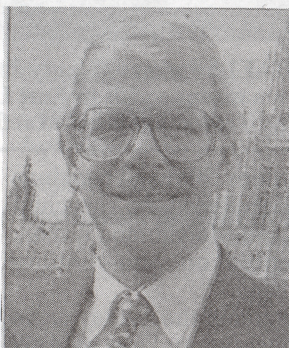

For many years, the Chairman John Tyndall, and his future, was the Tory party, with its endless diet of bogus claims to be pro-British and patriotic. Now that party has finally gone down to a defeat which all its deceit could not prevent.

During the most empty of content election in post-war history, every effort was made to pretend that the choice between Blair and loser Major represented a genuine choice for the British people.

Victor Tony Blair will continue to preside over the same ongoing dismantling of our country, and destruction of its people - albeit at a slightly faster pace than the cunning Tories.

The Tory skill was to slow down the process slightly when the public became restive - stepping up the pace again once suspicions had been allayed. Now that obstacle to nationalist progress has gone.

Blair was able to claim that he would keep his promises in office - having made so few pledges of substance that to do so presented no difficulty.

JOHN: Not a Major success!

He conjured up a vague impression of cake for everyone, with lashings of cream on top, in the ruthless scramble for power. The knives to cut it with will soon be out, and shortly after be turned on Blair, when the cake does not arrive.

On every major issue, Blair and his administration have little or nothing to offer.

On unemployment, a tiny number of jobs will be created for young people - largely by bribing employers into displacing older ones. The jobless millions will remain jobless. Blair exists to further promote the 'coolie' economy imported from the Third World, and imposed on increasing numbers of our people.

For pensioners, nothing is on offer but a 'review' of the pitiful amount they receive - not even re-linking to the general level of incomes. Education? Labour local authorities have the worst record in the country for dumbing-down the children in their care with 'politically correct' educational theories which do not work. Labour in government will reinforce the whole sorry

PORTRAIT OF THE DECLINE OF A NATION: This youth has just received an eleven year sentence for the gang-rape of an Austrian tourist, who was thrown naked into a canal! A prison sentence now means nothing. The British public are getting sick of the crazy policies of the Lib/Lab/Con gang, which have led to a country of mayhem, in which criminals celebrate their sentences, while millions go workless, and our OAPs live on a pittance. In London alone there are now 40,000 muggings each year.

On the soaring levels of crime of the last twenty years, who really imagines Labour introducing the stiff law and order policies which are needed?

On Europe, the movement towards complete loss of sovereignty to the EU will continue.

Immigration is one issue on which Labour can be trusted. They will increase the flood inwards. New Home Secretary Straw has already pledged to relax what controls exist.

Another is the 'political correctness' mania, which is increasingly unpopular, and will backfire on the its Stalinist promoters.

The new situation, both in Britain and within Europe, is that the old establishment is progressively being found out at last by a long-suffering public.

The potential for the 'new nationalism' which is sweeping Europe, and for the BNP, is now greater than at any time in the last fifty years.

In Britain, this election has pushed the BNP to the forefront of the field in fighting back against the three party club which is wrecking our country.

British Nationalist says ...

No.179 MAY 1997

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

There can be no doubt as to the direction now being taken both by Britain and other white countries.

The internal tensions created by liberalism - and its favourite offspring the insanity of mass immigration - are beginning to tell, not only in the most obvious ways, like our lawless streets, but also in the erosion of proper liberties as a heavy lid is applied to a pot whose contents are near explosion.

The political establishment must, of necessity, attempt to bar debate on what is occurring. While the mainstream media may be largely relied on to censor any sense of public revolt, the other avenue - the work of parties like the BNP - must be suppressed.

Witness the attendance of large numbers of police in riot equipment to halt a peaceful private meeting of middle-aged BNP supporters in Poole recently.

During the coming years, however, patriots have an invaluable weapon to set against the growing tyranny foisted on the British people.

The European Convention on Human Rights guarantees all of us the right to express our opinions 'without interference by public authority'. The convention prevails over any law passed by parliament. The lack of sovereignty of our parliament may be a source of regret in itself, but political weapons are there to be used - from whatsoever source they derive.

The European Court of Human Rights has ruled that the right to express opinions does not merely extend to viewpoints which are inoffensive to anyone, but includes the right to say things which the state or any section of the population claims to be offensive, shocking, or disturbing.

While this is not an argument for impolite language, which always makes for an unimpressive argument, it means that nationalists have the backing of the law, and must say so, whenever attempts are made to deprive us of our rights.

Eurotrickery on march again!

Federalists play waiting game over single currency and march to European superstate

BRITAIN'S political establishment is forging ahead with plans for a federal Europe - using all the panoply of Eurotricks they have employed for decades.

Ever since the scheme for a federal Europe was devised, shortly after the war, the federalists have known very well that the continent's peoples did not want their countries to disappear into a superstate run secretly by civil servants.

The membership of the Brussels committees, who hold the real power in deciding on the vast array of new laws being foisted on us, is secret. Even the telephone book of the European Commission is secret!

The founders of the European project, French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, and Jean Monnet, decided that stealth was the required tactic. The progress towards federalism would proceed in tiny stages, in as far as possible, so that public opinion could be persuaded that each small loss of sovereignty was too minor to make a fuss over. The nations would wake up, eventually, to find they were trapped. The gradualist trick is called 'neo-functionalism' in Europeak.

The present talk by Labour and the Tories of 'waiting and seeing about the single currency in Britain's interests' is another example of the method. Once public concern is allayed, the real and already decided intention will be revealed - to join.

When the Danish referendum on Maastricht produced a negative result, another one was held with massive media and government pressure on the population, and threats of a collapse in the economy. The same will happen in Britain, if it is necessary.

The move to a single currency is claimed to be for economic reasons. The removal of exchange rate risk is said to be the key to economic growth and employment. In reality, the disadvantages of not being able to alter the exchange rate, and ensure competitiveness, far outweigh any gains. The single market was similarly claimed to be a cure-all - yet European unemployment has rocketed.

The real purpose is political - to further remove from us control of our future, and place it in hands over which we have a minimal influence. The Eurotricksters in all the main parties are hard at work!

Heath recruited MI6 for covert pro-Europe propaganda campaign

THE astonishing story of how the then Prime Minister Edward Heath recruited MI6 for a covert pro-Europe campaign, during the 1970s, has recently been revealed.

Heath, who assured the country that no loss of sovereignty was involved in joining the EEC, presided over a dirty tricks operation, with planted articles, 'ghosted' letters in newspapers, and even the claimed sacking of a senior BBC journalist, who was seen as too anti-Europe.

The MI6-linked Information Research Department (IRD) - formally run by the Foreign Office, but sharing staff from the secret intelligence services - manipulated the news under Heath's orders. The operation was run by Norman Reddaway, an FO under-secretary. Pro-Europe MPs were flattered to find their articles in the Times, and elsewhere.

Head of the Civil Service, Sir

William Armstrong, eventually protested to Heath at the misuse of civil servants. The MI6 operation then ceased, but only after it had helped swing public opinion in the direction Heath wanted.

A senior Tory claims that Jack de Manio was removed as presenter of the BBC Today programme, following IRD pressure, and because of his anti-European stance.

The IRD was formed in 1948 to counter communist propaganda. By 1970 it had 400 staff. One of its early recruits was the spy Guy Burgess. The CIA, which shared the UK secret service's enthusiasm for Europe, funded the European Movement which also sought to influence opinion.

The revelations are yet another example of what nationalists have said for years - the media is fixed. The views of ordinary Britons have been systematically suppressed for decades.

Scandal of foreign funding for Tories

Secret Chinese and Muslim cash kept Major gang afloat

THE TORY PARTY has been secretly funded for years by an array of foreign interests, including a Hong Kong businessman, who wanted his father let off drugs charges, and a network of mosques. A year or two ago, the Tories were on their uppers, with a £10m. overdraft, and needed £20m. to fight the election. Conservative chairman Mawhinney said last March that the overdraft had been cleared, but refused to reveal the sources of cash.

'GOLDEN BOY'

Hong Kong publishing tycoon Ma Ching-Kwan was so generous that he became known as 'Golden Boy' by staff at Conservative Central Office. £1m. swelled the once poverty-stricken Tory coffers from this source alone.

In the case of Ma, the quid pro quo was simple - his father had fled to Taiwan in order to avoid British justice. He wanted Britain to quash drugs charges, dating from 1978, so that his father could return to Hong Kong in his final years.

David Mellor, the MP for Putney, was hired to assist Ma, and, in turn hired a QC to negotiate - Alan Jones who represented Kevin Maxwell. Mellor also personally discussed the case with the Hong Kong governor Chris Patten.

Mellor, himself, received tens of thousands of pounds to look after Ma's UK interests. He introduced Ma to the top echelons of the Tory establishment. Major invited Ma to tea, and discussed giving him an honour.

Staff at Central Office say that Ma would dispense thousands in cash "as though it were loose change". The tycoon also lavished luxury hotel visits to Hong Kong on various Tory MPs, including Terry Dicks, and Sir Keith Speed.

Eventually, Ma became disillusioned, finding he was not getting what he was paying for.

'SHARED VALUES'

Another £5m. has been given to the Tories, during the last year, by a shadowy syndicate of Middle Eastern businessman, who had collected the cash from mosques in Britain, the Middle East, Europe, and the US.

WE LOVE MICHAEL! Former Deputy Prime Minister Michael Heseltine mobbed by Asians on a mosque visit in East London during the election. Loads money for the Tories, but what exactly was expected in return?

The donations followed meetings between Jeffery Speed, the Tory chief fundraiser, and Mohammed Kahan, a man wanted on gun-running charges in Fiji.

Kahan says that the money came from 200 mosques, and was paid via offshore accounts to conceal the Middle Eastern connection, which would embarrass the Tories. The purpose was said by businessmen involved to be to persuade the Tories to improve ties with Muslims.

One Javed Mohammed, who heads the Muslim League in Britain, and is also a Tory party member, urged Muslims to vote Tory, saying that the party shared Muslim values.

The mystery of why both Major, and Heseltine, were feted by Muslims in East London, during the election campaign, is revealed. What exactly the implications for the British people would have been, owing to 'shared values', had Major won, is unknown.

Britain opens immigration door to homo marriages

FORMER Home Secretary Michael Howard recently allowed a Brazilian homosexual leave to remain in Britain on the grounds that he is the 'partner' of a man who is a 'gay rights' campaigner. Howard exercised his personal discretion in permitting Ander Da Silva, 26, (pictured) to stay in Britain, despite his having no case whatsoever to do so.

Incredibly, the permit was allowed despite Da Silva's 'husband' Mark Watson, 30, (also pictured) having served a six month prison sentence for forging papers to keep Da Silva in the UK. The latter was expelled as an illegal alien to South America.

Watson is a former illegal immigration officer, who falsely stamped Da Silva's passport, and made up a false file to conceal the deception. He later pleaded guilty to forgery.

Watson then arranged a legal trick by which Da Silva re-entered Britain via Ireland. The man was labelled an 'undesirable', but after an appeal the then Home Secretary came to his incredible decision on supposedly 'compassionate grounds'.

Technically, Da Silva can only remain for a year at present, but the notoriously prolonged appeals process means that he is effectively here to stay.

Labour's new Home Secretary, Jack Straw, like his predecessor Howard, has said that homosexual 'partners' will now be treated the same as heterosexuals when applying to enter the United Kingdom.

It is thought that Howard may have been influenced by a possible appeal to the European Court on grounds of the right to a private life - apparently meaning that anyone claiming a homosexual friend can come to Britain.

Lady Olga Maitland has warned that the case was an example of 'gender politics', which might lead to more immigration.

20 other cases of a similar kind have led to capitulation by the Home Office in a similar way. The 'gay rights' group Stonewall says that it is celebrating its activities in bringing brought about the new Home Office stance.

Da Silva says he is 'thrilled' by Howard's allowing him to stay. He is living in South London with Watson.

● Regular readers will be sorry to learn of the possible demise of Barnet Healthcare Trust's 'Cottaging and Cruising Project'.

This worthy 'outreach' scheme for homosexuals paid two men about £20,000 a year to hang around public toilets handing out condoms, and helpful advice, to pervers visiting them for mutually beneficial activities in the cubicles.

The project held a 'playshop' recently, during which participants were taught by 'role playing' exercises how to deal with the police should they arrive at toilets and arrest them.

Sadly, the Trust is reviewing funding for the project, since questions have been raised as to its effectiveness.

Muslim mourners ban whites from cemetery

MUSLIM mourners have been banning whites from visiting a cemetery in Blackburn, leading to angry protests.

Whites attempting to visit the graves of their loved ones, in the city's Pleasington cemetery, have found their way blocked by self-appointed Muslim 'stewards', and paths blocked by the cars of thousands of Asians.

Angry residents say that Blackburn Council, which runs the cemetery, has ignored the outrageous behaviour for years. The council has finally agreed to seek a meeting with Asian 'community leaders'.

One widower, John Flannery, when trying to visit his wife's grave, had his way blocked by Asians who refused to move aside. Dozens of residents have complained to the council.

● A white vicar, Rev. Richard Bashford, who is also a councillor, urged Asians to "team up" and prevent a white man being selected as candidate in the new Birmingham Sparkbrook constituency.

Bashford told a local paper: "I am personally distressed at the prospect of a white man being selected, when it is right that the candidate should be black or Moslem. I urge you to pledge that Sparkbrook returns a black Moslem MP".

● Oadby & Wigston councillors have voted to subsidise Muslim burials on the rates. £13,500 has been allotted to pay for Muslim burials at a special site in Leicester, where graves are elevated and face Mecca.

TV's Cook Report Fails In Criminal Entrapment Of BNP

THE LENGTHS to which the evil apparatus designed to destroy the British people are prepared to go were revealed in a failed attempt, by the Carlton TV Cook Report, to criminally entrap BNP members.

An approach was made last year to leading BNP member Nick Griffin, by two men who claimed to be representing the Front National. It was suggested that stronger links were needed between nationalist groups in European countries - a plausible story.

One of the men said he was a former French Foreign Legionnaire. Mr. Griffin met the men several times. They told a coherent story, and initially suggested nothing illegal or improper, although Mr. Griffin was properly suspicious.

After several meetings, it was suggested that BNP members should become involved in paramilitary training, and form a security force, with talk of £100,000 in funding - such groups are illegal in Britain. Enquiries then revealed that the men were from the Cook Report.

'EURONATS'

Jean-Marie Le Pen called recently for linking of 'Euronats', so Nick Griffin and the BNP had felt it worthwhile to explore the approaches, if only to discover who was behind them.

The two men made various mistakes during Mr. Griffin's meetings with them, which alerted the BNP to the likelihood either of a media scam, or of something more sinister.

Among the discrepancies, the 'Foreign Legionnaire' did not speak good French, and made a wild error concerning casualties at Dien Bien Phu. A photo was produced, which experts said was a fake.

Once it became clear that something was wrong, it was decided to play along with the two men, until they could be unmasked, but without breaking the law. When an invitation was made to meet a senior FN man in Toulon, enquiries showed that the flight booking had been made by Carlton TV - and the journey was not made.

An electrical device was found in Mr. Griffin's home, after the two men had visited him. He contacted local police immediately, who confirmed that it could be used in connection with bomb making.

Once challenged, one of the men in effect admitted that he had been hired for the entrapment attempt.

Subsequently, the Cook Report has written persistently to Mr. Griffin demanding an interview.

In view of the improper activities of this seedy bottom rung of the British establishment towards him, Mr. Griffin has refused to have any contact with Cook or his grubby programme.

ENEMIES OF DEMOCRACY: Left-wing groups, outside the BBC's Broadcasting House, make a doomed attempt to get the BNP party political broadcast banned. The whole evil apparatus designed to destroy the British people was in full evidence during the election campaign, with even a criminal entrapment attempt by Carlton TV's Cook Report.

'DOSSIER'

The corpulent Cook had clearly hoped to have a media field day, with BNP members training illegally in woods, under secret TV surveillance. No doubt Cook would have appeared from behind a tree, microphone in hand. The 'dossier' would then have been handed to police, with a view to the arrest of those involved.

The amount of money spent on the failed entrapment must have run into thousands of pounds.

Infiltration of nationalist groups, and incitement to commit illegal acts, has long been part of the state and establishment repertoire. All BNP members are urged to be as cautious as Mr. Griffin, when approaches are made which might be from these sources.

A press release about Cook led to coverage in Time Out magazine, but not in any other publication. The Web and Internet fortunately now allow nationalists to publicise events of this kind world-wide, so all nationalists have been alerted in many countries to the smear techniques used in this case.

ELECTION ROUNDUP.....ELECTION ROUNDUP.....ELECTION ROUNDUP.....ELECTION ROUNDUP

"Stamp out BNP" said black New Labour candidate

Black New Labour candidate for Bethnal Green, Oona King, called, during the election, for the BNP to be 'stamped out'. The former 'equal opportunities' worker (pictured) showed off her party's democratic credentials in attacking the BNP. It is not all gloom for us, however. She used to attend MEP Glenys Kinnock in Brussels, and warned in the Guardian: "I used to work just down the corridor from the French National Front leader Jean-Marie Le Pen. In 1982 he had one councillor, and everybody thought he was irrelevant. Now he has over 1,000, and controls some towns." Retiring MP Peter Shore had promised local Bengalis one of their own to replace him. Labour Headquarters wanted Claude 'Bringmorein' Moraes (pictured on p.5) as candidate, but he was Indian so unwanted by Bengalis. Compromise candidate King getting the job was described as a "disaster" by Bengali Labourites. "It's terrible news for the community" said one. So much for 'racial harmony' in the East End!

● GRIEVOUS BODILY HARM - THE NEW LABOUR WAY!

A New Labour canvasser has been charged with GBH following an attack on the warden of sheltered accommodation during the election. Philip Harvey, 42, is charged with assaulting Ann Jonah, 53, while canvassing for New Labour in London's Camberwell. It appears that Oona King was not joking when she spoke of 'stamping out' opposition!

GETTING INTO THE SWING OF DEMOCRACY: Opponents like the BNP are to be 'stamped out' said New Labour candidate Oona King in the East End. King was picked in Bethnal Green because of racial divisions between Bengalis and Indians. Local resident Jewish John Dequetia, 86, said recently: "Old people are being mugged and robbed. Young Asian kids are running around in gangs and doing as they please."

Dr. Donald Stevens floors the opposition in Farnborough debate

ALDERSHOT BNPPPC Dr. Donald Stevens wiped the floor with the opposition during a debate in the constituency organised for candidates by Churches Together.

Losing Labour candidate Terry Bridgeman refused to take part in the Farnborough debate, and handed out leaflets to the 260 people who attended, which said that he would not share a platform with 'extremists'. Bridgeman's posing drew front page publicity for the BNP in the local newspaper (right).

Tories and Liberal Democrats took part among others - and were no doubt none too pleased by the good reception given to Dr. Stevens - who was enthusiastically applauded after speaking on morality, Europe, and other issues.

A tiny contingent of Trotskyites was removed from the hall by stewards, after shouting the usual abuse.

Dr. Stevens said that books set for O and A levels in schools were often full of obscenity. The Tory refused to answer, and the Liberal did himself no good with a respectable Christian audience by saying that it all depended on the definition.

For once, the BNP were allowed to debate, and Donald Stevens made a fine advertisement for the BNP - with Labour making fools of themselves in refusing to face opponents.

Labour man in protest over BNP

ALDERSHOT Labour candidate Mr Terry Bridgeman boycotted a question and answer session in Farnborough on Tuesday in protest at the presence of a British National Party candidate.

Mr Bridgeman upheld Labour's policy of not sharing a platform with what it considers to be extreme parties. He handed out a statement explaining his position to the 260 people who attended the Churches Together in Farnborough General Election Forum at the Salesian College in Reading Road.

The forum went ahead with Conservative Mr Gerald Howarth, Liberal Democrat Mr Adrian Collett, Dr Donald Stevens of the BNP and Independent candidate Arthur Pendragon. Five people were asked to leave for shouting at Dr Stevens but otherwise the meeting passed off without incident.

Mr Bridgeman said: "I am extremely disappointed at not being able to attend. I have known about this meeting for several months and was looking forward to taking part. However I do not believe that undemocratic, extremist parties of any kind have a place in British politics and I would certainly not share a platform with a candidate who would deny full citizenship rights to millions of British people."

Dr Stevens said: "We in the BNP are willing to go on a platform with anybody, no matter how much we disagree with them."

Mr Collett said: "It's a question of liberty as a whole - I can strongly object to what someone else says but will defend their right to say it."

"Having said that I despise everything the BNP stands for and I hope to see them severely rejected."

Mr Bridgeman added: "I understand all the arguments about freedom of speech and access to elections but they become invalidated when people use those freedoms of speech and opportunities in order to end them."

● TAUNTON RESIDENTS PAY £500 DEPOSIT FOR BNP CANDIDATE

LOCALS BACK 'RACIST' PARTY

A GROUP of residents this week stumped up the £500 deposit for a candidate of an allegedly "racist" organisation to stand at Taunton in the General Election.

Politicians and racial equality campaigners expressed horror and outrage at the British National Party's decision.

They pointed to stated BNP aims such as repatriating coloured immigrants and the setting up of a new Commonwealth of only self-governing white states.

But BNP candidate Leslie Andrews, 67, of Luton, says the issues he will fight on include restoring national sovereignty by leaving the European Union, she was appalled because of the BNP's racist aims.

mind people will view the BNP's policies of racial intolerance with the contempt they deserve."

Libby Ligo (Labour) said: "We believe in the value of a multi-cultural society and we detest the overt racism of the BNP." Brian Abern (Referendum Party) said: "I don't welcome any candidate with extreme racist views and hope Taunton electors give no support to the BNP."

Mr Andrews' agent, Bruce Cowd, said: "These people are fascists. They just want a dictatorship where you can only vote for three parties."

Commenting on Mr Andrews' apparently slim chances of winning the Taunton seat, he said: "You never know - during canvassing, 60 per cent of people said they will vote for three parties."

Alan Gould (BNP)

ONE of the great failings of modern life in Britain is a catastrophic collapse in morals. It affects everything and stems from the top. From adulterous, corrupt Government ministers to church sex scandals involving minors. We in the British National Party believe that there is a Government duty to set firm moral standards.

A big clean-up on sleaze in the media would go a long way to restoring the moral fabric of our nation which includes the support of traditional family values.

In tandem with declining morals has come declining educational standards. We believe that emphasis on the three Rs, with regular spelling tests are a must, including more stress on science and engineering. Political brainwashing should not be undertaken and trendy, incompetent teachers should be sacked.

Our pensions are an international disgrace. The BNP would immediately boost pensions and provide free heating in winter to OAPs.

These are just some of the reasons for voting Alan Gould, BNP.

ALAN GOULD: More sound BNP local newspaper coverage in the Chingford constituency where he stood

ELECTION EXTRA

Roger Wood is the BNP candidate in this election.

He is very concerned about crime, housing and jobs. He says it is a scandal that outsiders can come in and be housed ahead of local people.

He has no faith in Labour to deliver on the economy and that is why he backs BNP policies for full employment and growth. Crime needs tough action, not Tory half-measures, he says. He supports capital punishment for terrorists.

CRIME: Britain is collapsing under an unprecedented wave of violent crime and yet authority has again and again demonstrated a response of softness. Violent thugs are being sent on free holidays to the world's sunspots while rapists are given derisory sentences. This must stop! The death penalty must be restored. Weak judges must be sacked. Prisons must be made places to which the criminal will not want to return.

EDUCATION: Our children should be taught by tried and trusted methods. Discipline must be brought back to the classroom, with the right of corporal punishment restored. "Trendy" and incompetent teachers must be sacked. Schools should teach British history, heritage, customs and culture instead of "multi-culturalism".

EUROPE: Britain must declare independence from the bureaucrats in the European Union. We must reject the single European currency. We must reject the EU making our laws.

JOBS: The BNP is the only party pledged to bring about full employment. We will achieve this by protecting British industry from foreign imports and by embarking on a massive programme to rebuild our manufacturing base so that we will produce all our needs in this country.

SLEAZE AND FILTH: The BNP is pledged to a massive clean-up of Britain whereby our young folk will not be exposed to degenerate influences which corrupt moral values. This must start with a clean-up of television and other mass media. As part of this we must restore the institution of the family.

Roger Wood

British National Party

ENTERING THE MAINSTREAM: Roger Wood's coverage for his Morley candidacy, in the local newspaper, is an example of how the BNP is moving forward. This sort of solid and smear free publicity for nationalism is now to be obtained all over the country.

The insidious yellow star of the European Union flies high above Marks and Spencer in the Oxford Street/Baker Street branch, on a daily basis, while our very own Union flag flies but 14 times a year, this upon the recommendation of the Home Office. This is the information given by a Mrs. Kennedy, who works in the chairman's office at Marks and Spencer.

Alas, according to Mrs. Kennedy, they do not wish to fly the Union flag as often as it would become very tatty, but they do not mind if the European flag does. What a pathetically lame excuse. M&S spend millions on advertising their products, but cannot afford to replace our Nation's flag too often. A flag that we are all proud of, and has been in more battles than Marks and Spencers have stores.

The last time that yellow stars were enforced upon a nation was under Hitler's Nazi Germany. Isn't it ironic that a by-and-large Jewish company should now be so proud as to fly these wretched stars from their flagship store, a flag which symbolises the New European Tyranny.

Sadly, if Marks and Spencer are not prepared to fly our flag, we will not be able to support their stores with our hard-earned British money. Letter, Eurofacts

Charles Pollard, the chief constable of Thames Valley police, expresses his doubts about the desirability of zero tolerance policing. He uses phrases such as 'alienating communities' and in-sensitive policing'.

However, a policy of what might be called blind-eye policing has been adopted recently because of the apparent readiness of substantial numbers of people to riot and burn.

This has meant in practice that law abiding people in these

There will be no Labour sleaze in this election. The media have commanded it.

The election will then return a Labour government. The media will then declare that the people have spoken, and the media have spoken for the people. After that there will be Labour sleaze. The media will command it. Their vengeance will be terrible.

Matthew Parris, The Times

With the approach of a general election, there is added focus upon the problems of sleaze, corruption, and lack of leadership in public life. What is surprising is the lack of appreciation of the role of the electorate in this state of affairs.

As student at Leeds University in the late 1960s., I had to endure a student president whose qualities of leadership left much to be desired. He espoused vehemently an ultra-Left-wing credo, the inadequacies of which were apparent long before communism cracked at the seams. He denied the right of free speech and congress to those of a different political persuasion to himself. He disrupted my education at the said institution. He ignored awkward questions posed to him in public.

In such a character there is a lack of perspicacity, a meanness of spirit, and an indifference to the rights of others. Yet this individual has been selected as a constituency representative in Parliament for prospective Secretary of State for Education and then for Home Affairs. In view of his past record he is patently unsuitable for both offices of state.

Can anyone explain this phenomena?

Letter, Sunday Telegraph

Very few of the people close to Blair believe any of the tosh being peddled to the electorate. They're simply sailing under a flag of convenience. Blair keeps banging on about the Tory 'lie machine'. What the hell does he think Peter Mandelson and Alastair Campbell do for a living?

The Labour Party hasn't changed much. It has merely reached a Faustian pact with Blair, which it will renege on once the election is over. Old Labour will come crawling out of the woodwork.

The Asian newspaper East was kind enough to devote its entire front page to our election campaign. Here is a publication which works quite openly for the advancement of one race - but others, to white whites, are denigrated for doing the same. It claimed that 'hundreds' of demonstrators would descend on the BBC to stop our broadcast. The 'hundreds' may be seen in our page three photo.

Notorious Claude 'Bringmorein' Moraes (pictured), director of the Council for the Welfare of Immigrants, says in the same paper that the 'primary purpose' rule, that immigrants must not get married simply to come here, should be repealed. In other words, anyone can form a marriage of convenience to get into Britain. At present, 65% of wives are banned under the rule - which tells us the scale of marriage trickery which is being tried on.

ELECTION TALK

- Arthur Scargill's communists appeared to be a little confused during the election. A supporter, who appeared in their election broadcast, said that they wanted to see more "community within geographical areas". That's funny! It's exactly what nationalists want - the geographical area in our case being Great Britain.
- The late John Major (who?) said that the best moment of his campaign was going to the East End to visit a mosque. In the event, he was mobbed by Asians, and prevented from entering by security people. For our explanation see page two.
- The late Home Secretary Michael Howard said "We have nothing to fear from freedom of speech", when he was asked to ban the BNP Party Political Broadcast. Funny! The Tories have spent the last 18 years trying to ban freedom of speech, with BN editor John Morse, and Chairman John Tyndall, sent to prison during the 1980s. for drawing attention to black crime in BNP publications. Curiously, a similar fate did not befall Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir Paul Condon, when he did the same thing more recently.
- Tony Blair let slip his real attitude to the British people during the election. Asked about opposition to a federal Europe, by a Sunday Times journalist, he said: "If that's the sort of country people want - well, sod them."
- Then Shadow Chancellor of the Exchequer Gordon Brown showed off his knowledge of economics during the campaign. "What we need" he said "is a strong but competitive exchange rate." Since the two things are contradictory he may well have some difficulty in office. Perhaps he should be the Chancer of the Exchequer!
- Gerry Gable, editor of respected extreme-left wing magazine Searchlight (popularly known as Searchliar), made an admission on TV news. The main parties were such rubbish, he said, that no wonder people were turning to nationalism and the BNP. For once, we can agree!
- Ceefax ran no less than two pages of its coverage on BNP policies during the election. This makes a welcome change. The policy of the media for years has been never to let on what we actually stand for. It might prove too popular.
- An angry resident of Westminster called the BNP to ask whether we had a candidate standing in his area. There were 50,000 Moroccans in the borough alone, and Tory candidate Alan Clark was not right-wing enough.
- A middle-aged lady, who signed the BNP's nomination paper in one constituency, received a threatening phone call from the Trotskyites ordering her to withdraw her signature. She invited these criminals to come to her home, and give her a lift to the Town Hall, so that she could oblige them. When two of them arrived they found two police officers sitting on the sofa waiting for them! Smart and brave lady, who we warmly thank.
- UK Independence Party big-wig Dr. Alan Sked laid out his party's stall in the Guardian before the poll. The fact that most of a page was given to him by that newspaper tells one something about what he stands for without even reading it - and we were not disappointed. Britain is doing splendidly said Sked. Crime has only doubled - better than other countries. The NHS enjoys the great merit of being cheap, sez Sked - no doubt he gets private treatment. The main problem he mentioned was the need for more homosexual rights! Sked also produced some figures on race attacks to show how wicked whites are. In fact, the figures showed that non-whites are more likely to attack whites than vice-versa.
- A BNP man was handed an anti-BNP leaflet by the Anti-Nazi League in Rossendale & Darwen. He went straight to the police with it, who told him: "Very nasty leaflet this sir. We may have to arrest people".

BN BRIEFING

FIDDLED JOB FIGURES

BN readers will not be surprised to learn that the jobless figures are being fiddled again. This time staff at JobCentres have been intimidated into registering phantom job placements - causing massive over-reporting of job creation.

Managers at North London JobCentres are said to have ordered staff to record foreign students, with existing jobs, as having been found work. The jobs were additionally shown as having gone to the long-term unemployed. Another scam was to record the entire work force of local firms as having been found jobs by the JobCentres.

We wonder why foreign students are being given jobs at all, when our own people are desperate for work.

HOW TO BE ANTI-RACIST

Those who thought that 'colour-blindness' was the mark of the true 'anti-racist' had better buck up their ideas. US black feminist academic Patricia Williams, who gave the BBC Reith Lectures recently, says that ignoring race is, in fact, pretending that everyone is white - and therefore betrays a racist assumption.

Clear now?

AUSTRIAN POET WINS DAMAGES

Austrian poet Gerd Honsik, who was imprisoned for writing a satirical poem about discredited Holocaust promoter Simon Wiesenthal, has won his appeal to the European Court of Human Rights. The court has ordered the Austrian government to pay him damages.

RED INK SCANDAL

'Politically correct' Canadian teacher James Weekes has persuaded staff at the Sir Graham Balfour High School in Stafford to use green ink on homework, since red is 'macho', and has a supposedly negative influence on pupils. Weekes learnt of the theory while on a training course in arch politically correct Canada.

Letters

Write to: The Editor, British Nationalist, PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW.

Sir,
I am writing to wish you well in your campaign for parliament.

I am 83, and fought for the country I once loved from Normandy to Kiel - only to come home to a Labour Party which did nothing for the soldiers or their families at all.

They nationalised everything they could lay their hands on, giving their mates top jobs, and lost our contracts abroad because of union rules, Red Robbo at Leyland etc. You don't see many lorries that are British today.

We have lost our freedom of speech, and are not allowed to speak our minds in case we are called 'racist', and liable to be arrested.

My borough, Newham, is run for immigrants.

The race relations policies should be scrapped - they work only for blacks. The sanctimonious hypocrites in parliament are traitors. The few who stand up for Britain are shouted down as 'Nazis'.

We will never get a decent pension while world-wide scroungers and crooks seek asylum here, walking away with more money than the people who fought for a better life in the war. We British have become second-class citizens in our country.

Tony Banks MP recently ranted about the death of a black man in custody. If he had been white, Banks would have said nothing.

Name And Address Supplied

Sir,
While at college, I was told by a left-leaning tutor, who regularly wrote to MPs., that such letters are taken to represent the views of 600 people. If enough write, a 'climate of opinion' can be formed in the politicians' minds which may influence their decisions.

The key is not to display your political background too clearly, but to appear as a potential supporter, or 'floating voter'.

This tactic is frequently orchestrated by the left in letter writing campaigns.

I propose that we all get into the habit of plenty of letter writing, and create a 'climate of opinion' of our own.

Paul Henderson,
Surrey

Sir,
I write this letter to congratulate all those who stood for the BNP as candidates in the May general election.

These people have shown true British grit, and their commitment has shown the way forward to those who waver about the BNP.

Now the party can build on their dedication and march forward with confidence.

M. Morris,
Middlesex

Sir,
Your 'Mindbenders' pamphlet is interesting and informative, and corrects misleading information.

Many people are sympathetic to the Palestinian cause, when they hear of the murderous attacks made on that people by the US-backed Zionist Israeli regime.

The West Bank is being over-run by a war machine supplied by the US, and subsidised to the tune of billions of dollars every year by US taxpayers.

Any feeble response by the Arabs is immediately condemned as terrorism with shouts of 'we will not tolerate it'.

No such voice was heard from the US when the Irgun and Stern gangs were killing British troops after the war. The Hollywood script writer Ben Hecht coined the phrase "Every time a British soldier is killed I have a little holiday in my heart."

Anon,
Cambridgeshire

Sir,
The British National Debt now stands at about £360 bn..

If you bound a stack of £500 notes tightly you would have a pile eight inches high. If you bound one billion pounds it would be 600 feet high. Thus the British debt is a sort of Wigan Alps, with 360 piles 600 feet high.

It makes me think as I cash my miserly pittance of an army war pension.

Harry Mullin
Glasgow

UK GOVERNMENT BACKS EU RACISM INQUISITION

THE EUROPEAN UNION is to go ahead with plans for a 'centre' to monitor so-called racism and xenophobia - with the full backing of the British Government.

The plans for an 'inquisition' against white people, who do not wish their societies to be destroyed, are being discussed by foreign ministers in Luxembourg. The UK government originally refused to back the scheme because it said the EU would be given control over national policy on immigrants.

The centre will have power to collect information about patriotic organisations. EU Social Affairs Commissioner Padraig Flynn has promoted the centre as part of the 1997 'European Year Against Racism'. He described it as "a message of hope."

The new 'Spanish Inquisition' is undoubtedly a response to the rocketing success of European nationalist movements, particularly the Front National in France, and Jorg Haider (pictured) with the Freedom Party in Austria, which won 28% of the vote in a recent poll.

Frank Vanhecke, of the patriotic Vlaams Blok in Belgium has condemned the EU plans as an "attack on national ideas."

Britain was recently condemned by the United Nations for refusing to ban groups which it said incited racial hatred. Perhaps the EU should have been included!

The Geneva Committee for Elimination of Racial Discrimination has voiced "special concern" about the UK view of Article Four of the Convention on Racial Discrimination, which obliged countries to ban 'organisations which promote racial discrimination'.

Germany bans some groups but much opinion says that this has only driven them underground. The recent condemnations follow prosecution of members of the Nazi C18 organisation in Britain.

Any attempt by the new UK government to ban legitimate and respectable patriotic parties, like the BNP, will backfire, exposing further to public view the progressively fascist and totalitarian regime which is being set up in the UK. The government is caught between two stools, wishing to ban white organisations outright, but needing to keep up a pretence of democracy.

JORG HAIDER: like Jean-Marie Le Pen in France, he is enjoying enormous success in promoting nationalism in Austria

FOREIGN NEWS

LA BASED BLACK GANGS 650,000 STRONG

The FBI has disclosed that black and Hispanic Los Angeles-based gangs now have a membership of an incredible 652,000, and have extended their tentacles into 42 states.

Stephen Wiley, of the bureau violent crime section, has told a Senate committee that groups with affiliation to the two main LA gangs, the Bloods and the Crips, are now present in 180 communities, and have murdered 7,000 people in the last ten years. One quarter of the members live in Los Angeles.

The FBI report comes during the week in which the mayor of Los Angeles, Richard Riordan, said that LA was "not only back but better" after the three day 1992 riots, which followed violent arrest of Rodney King.

South Central area of the city is much the same as in 1992, in spite of government promises of huge aid budgets - really bribes to keep the area quiet. Large areas remain burnt-out, after the riots. Only a fraction of the $6 bn. promised by President Clinton has materialised. Banks, unsurprisingly, do not want to lend in the area.

A 'Rebuild LA' programme, formed after the riots, has just held its final conference. It was hosted, appropriately, by Michael Milken, the junk bond racketeer, who was sent to prison for his swindles.

The black police chief appointed after the riots has now been retired, after complaints that he was more talk than action. The area is fully expected to explode again, given any excuse.

● US Schools are now more segregated than during the 1950s., says a Harvard University report. Non-white pupils are increasingly low-achieving. "Race relations may be moving back to the 19th. century" said the report.

Some experts say that increasing numbers of parents - of all races - no longer want integration. Federal courts ruled in the early 1990s. that schools no longer had to 'bus' children to other ethnic areas.

● A federal US appeals court has ruled that the ban on affirmative action, which California voters approved under Proposition 209, is valid, and promotes equality rather than discrimination. Another court had ruled that race quotas were anti-discriminatory!

Governor Pete Wilson, who supported 209 - backed by 54% of the electorate - said that the ruling would assure genuine equality. An appeal is expected, however. Judge Diarmuid O'Scannlain said that states could abolish preferential programmes.

For decades, ordinary white people have been excluded from jobs and college places under the infamous racial quota systems.

Analysis and commentary

For the first time since its formation in 1982, the BNP stood more than 50 candidates in the general election, who were each backed by, at the minimum, an election address delivered to every home. 2.2 million items of propaganda were put out, indicating a readership of at least 4 million, given more than one person per home!

In 1983, the party stood 54 candidates, but most of the seats were fought without election addresses, since the BNP had not yet accumulated the resources for a full campaign. A record number of seats were fought this time, with 56 candidates standing in constituencies the length and breadth of the land.

The election broadcast went out on all TV channels, except the notorious porn and filth-mongering Channel 4, plus on BBC radio 2, 4, Talk Radio, Virgin, and Classic. The broadcast was certainly by far the best put out by the small parties, and undoubtedly had a major impact in making the BNP even more of a household name than it already was.

The most important point made was about our policy of providing resettlement grants for immigrants. It is a fact of life that attitudes change when money is on offer!

Many of the seats fought had had little or no party work carried out in them before the election. The future vote potential must therefore be gauged from those seats where the BNP had previously been active, and where the best results were obtained. The overall average vote is not particularly meaningful.

In East London, party chairman John Tyndall won 7.26% of the vote in Poplar, and Dave King won the best vote of the campaign with 7.5% in Bethnal Green.

A really excellent result was obtained by Frances Taylor in Dewsbury, who saved her deposit with 5.18%. This result was perhaps the most significant of the campaign, since there has been a widespread feeling for years within the BNP that it was far easier to obtain support in the south, and particularly in London. Frances's result should help to change this perception.

Keith Francis's 3.56% in West Ham deserves too a special mention.

Given persistent grassroots work, there is no reason why the BNP should not pick up votes of over 10% in parliamentary elections throughout the country in future.

Voters in this general election clearly had one aim in mind - to remove the Tories. Tactical voting for the other two major parties was the way achieve this, with the smaller parties squeezed, and this is what in fact occurred. The Liberal Democrats picked up many new seats on this basis. The Labour landslide had far more to do with the arrogance and incompetence of the Tories than with enthusiasm for Blair.

Comparison of the results obtained by the BNP, and other parties who would be bracketed with us by voters, is gratifying.

The BNP bested the UK Independence Party in more seats than the reverse, won a higher average vote, and saved a far higher proportion of deposits.

This 'politically correct' operation, run by Dr. Alan Sked, is thought to be near a split, with the potential to attract many of the members to the BNP - a far more robust organisation.

The UKIP hardly attracted a word of criticism from the media, and the Guardian gave Sked most of a page to lay out his stall. Yet the 'politically incorrect' BNP beat it in terms of results, if not in seats fought.

What it shows is that it is not necessary to toady to the liberal media to get votes.

The pitiful National Democrats were seen off, together with Third Way, the National Front, and the all-black Fourth Party. The BNP won a higher average vote than all these.

The Referendum Party spent an incredible £25 for every vote obtained, with near a million videos distributed free. Yet it saved only 25 deposits out of over 500 seats fought - a poorer ratio than the BNP.

Its vote was better than the BNP, with about 1300 votes a seat, but what could we not do with such funding available, or even a fraction of the £20 million that Goldsmith spent! The Referendum Party made a convenient single-issue protest vote, but despite all the money, and an attack of political correctness which saw those with the slightest hint of the 'extremist' tag being ejected, it made no breakthrough.

BNP members were told by Referendum Party members in one area that they were now interested in the BNP, and that they had had 'Nazis' shouted at them in the street - as does anyone who is pro-British and patriotic!

The New Labour honeymoon will soon be over, with the press sharpening its knives to cut down the man they have built up. The fact that Blair has had to move so far to the right personally indicates that the left is just about finished.

The Tories have driven away their natural supporters and activists by the million. Major refused even to condemn Labour plans to increase immigration. There is every opportunity to attract former Tories to our ranks, as well as many on the left who are disillusioned with New Labour which has many policies indistinguishable from the Tories - particularly on unemployment.

The attachment of voters to the main parties is weakening, as the widespread tactical voting between the big three indicated, and this is a vital precondition for progress.

The BNP congratulates everyone on an excellent and well-fought campaign. The key to the future is grassroots electoral work, pumping out material promoting the 'new nationalism', which is growing throughout Europe, and meeting the people.

There is no doubt that the BNP's image is no longer quite the diabolical affair which the media has purveyed, but let them see that we really do not have horns as the newspapers and TV claim!

USING THE WEB - THREE SITES ONLINE DURING ELECTION!

During April's General Election campaign the BNP enjoyed no less than three sites on the Web putting out the nationalist message to the entire country.

BNP Scotland, North West BNP, and the main British Nationalists Home Page were all doing something which was unthinkable even two years ago - making available uncensored nationalist ideas to a vast number of homes, businesses, and universities, which are now connected to the Internet.

It is as though an army of partisans, in an occupied country, fighting with bows and arrows against guns, were suddenly given metaphorical guns themselves.

Two years ago, most people had no idea what nationalists were really saying beyond what the controlled media chose to pretend to them - which bore little resemblance to reality. They had never seen a nationalist publication.

Now thousands and thousands of people, including students in schools and universities, are in daily contact with what nationalists really say via hundreds of nationalist Web sites throughout the white world. We are becoming a part of the everyday political scenery.

Make no mistake, the Web is going to utterly change politics in Britain and elsewhere, and open up the field to new ideas in a manner unseen since the war. It is already happening even with access to the Web in its infancy.

Two years ago, foreign nationalist groups were something one heard about occasionally in an imported magazine. Now there is a brisk daily contact between us all via e-mail. Better yet is the near impossibility of controlling the flow of ideas through the new medium. Germany tried to block access to radical material recently, and failed dismally.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the European Community: trade with Europe where it suits us but no political ties.
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of Government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food; also the restoration of the fishing industry by protection of our traditional fishing grounds.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO; closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain; British withdrawal from the war in former Yugoslavia, where no British interest is at stake; the bringing home of British forces from Germany; the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- A return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
